COURSE DESCRIPTION:

This course will present an introduction to the art and tools of music. We will learn how to appreciate music from the fifteenth to the twenty-first centuries, examining how technologies, from musical instruments, through amplification, recording, and computer technology, have changed the way we make, listen to, exchange, and conceive of music from various parts of the world.

One aim of the class will be to get students to listen to and understand kinds of music that they haven't thought much about before, from classical to world to popular to experimental genres. The course will focus on listening and understanding, with the hope that your ears can be opened to new sounds and new possibilities, so you will be able to hear more than you have ever heard before.

It is a recommended prerequisite to all the other music courses at NJIT.

ATTENDANCE POLICY:

An attendance sheet will be passed around at the beginning of each class for students to sign. All absences and late arrivals are considered unexcused. Excused absences will be allowed, but it is entirely the responsibility of the student to contact the Dean of Students to explain the absence and determine if it may be considered excused. The Dean of Students will then contact me with their determination.

It is also entirely the student's responsibility to reach out to me to follow up on any missed quizzes or assignments in the event of an absence.

COVID PRECAUTION POLICY FOR IN-PERSON CLASSES:

Although not mandated, both students and instructors are free to wear facemasks in the classroom if they so desire. Instructors are not allowed to set their own rules on this issue. The university will be actively monitoring the situation and if the conditions call for it, the policy may be changed.

EATING AND DRINKING IN CLASS:

According to NJIT policy, it is up to the instructor to allow (or not) eating and drinking in the classroom or studio. However, NJIT recommends that eating not be permitted in the classroom or studio, but appropriate breaks be given to students to eat (especially in long classes). My feeling is that beverages and small snacks are fine up to the point where such things might somehow become disruptive. If we just apply some reasonable common sense and consideration towards others, we should not have any problems.

NJIT statement on academic integrity:

Academic Integrity is the cornerstone of higher education and is central to the ideals of this course and the university. Cheating is strictly prohibited and devalues the degree that you are working on. As a member of the NJIT community, it is your responsibility to protect your educational investment by knowing and following the academic code of integrity policy that is found at:

<http://www5.njit.edu/policies/sites/policies/files/academic-integrity-code.pdf>.

Please note that it is my professional obligation and responsibility to report any academic misconduct to the Dean of Students Office. Any student found in violation of the code by cheating, plagiarizing or using any online software inappropriately will result in disciplinary action. This may include a failing grade of F, and/or suspension or dismissal from the university. If you have any questions about the code of Academic Integrity, please contact the Dean of Students Office at dos@njit.edu.
