

COM 354 Designing Digital Media Spring 2024
Prof. Kevin McIntosh (klm5@njit.edu)
Monday 6-9 p.m. CKB 206
Office Hours: Mon. 4-6 p.m., Fenster Hall 440 (& by appointment)

Course description: This course explores how computer technology has influenced the presentation of information and the ways in which it is structured via digital media. Students learn how various web-based media platforms and tools are used to present familiar topics in ways that are both dynamic and that align with contemporary culture. Through guided interactive activities, the course develops techniques for presenting information for technical, commercial, and artistic use. Projects involve the use of HTML editors, NJIT networks, and graphical and animation software.

Learning outcomes for this course include: building practical understanding of the processes and tools of communication media (i.e., hardware, software and networks), specifically as they relate to the World Wide Web; applying critical frameworks (including identifying and resolving communication design problems); cultivating the ability to write and edit verbally and visually (including graphics); designing within constraints, and with regard to economic, environmental, social, political, and ethical concerns.

This course is designed to ensure NJIT's Communication and Media program successfully provides its students with a foundation in a range of forms of communication. The course's overall objectives are designed to promote each student's competence or mastery of multi-media communications, using the worldwide-web as an informational and expressive tool. Through project development and completion, students build practical skills and processes in developing projects using online networks competently and artistically. The course will improve a student's flexibility in communication by using contemporary media formats, thus advancing their general skillset and ability to deliver content to public audiences. Core competencies addressed by the course include: Student awareness of, and engagement with, communications strategies; building perception of contemporary communication(s) environments; performative practice with communication tools; critical thinking on the subject matter; cultivation of communication literacy.

Students in this course will:

Gain firsthand understanding of a communicative genre.

Explore the practical and creative implementation of using Website tools and applications.

Develop technical and design skills using web based media.

Use peers to develop ideas and cultivate production of original work.

Foster online publications.

There is no textbook for this course. Course materials, prepared by the professor, will be posted on Canvas and the syllabus.

To create work for this course, access to a computer with document layout and design software is required. If you do not have graphic design software on your personal computer, all assignments can be completed with software accessible via NJIT computer labs or library.

During the semester, you will maintain a website on NJIT's AFS system. Instructions for setting up NJIT homepage: <http://ist.njit.edu/personal-webpages-on-afs/>

Each of the course assignments must be posted to your website, and then linked to an COM 354 Coursework index that you will create (Week 3).

Academic Integrity is the cornerstone of higher education and is central to the ideals of this course and the university. Cheating is strictly prohibited and devalues the degree that you are working on. As a member of the NJIT community, it is your responsibility to protect your educational investment by knowing and following the academic code of integrity policy that is found at: <http://www5.njit.edu/policies/sites/policies/files/academic-integrity-code.pdf>.

Please note that it is my professional obligation and responsibility to report any academic misconduct to the Dean of Students Office. Any student found in violation of the code by cheating, plagiarizing or using any online software inappropriately will result in disciplinary action. This may include a failing grade of F, and/or suspension or dismissal from the university. If you have any questions about the code of Academic Integrity, please contact the Dean of Students Office at dos@njit.edu.
